The reason why he did not is indicated received fair treatment, and they manifested correspondent anticipated. The word by the Republicant.

"tariff" was not mentioned in Woonsocket or Pawtucket from the beginning of the cauvass to election day. It ought to have been—crats in such a contest—the proverblai by the Democrats—but it wasn't. The only variableness of Hamilton County (Cincinhigh-tariff speeches made at all were made nati). Among the crumbs of comfort left in Providence, where the Republicans fired their biggest gun. Aldrich presided and McKinley talked and there was a great hurral for "protection." Moreover, it was in Providence that Ladd captured the Pemocratic political workers who were disgrunthe defeat of James McNally as a candidate for Mayor last year. What was the result? This:

ley. Aldrich, money and defections from his own ranks, Gov. Davis made a gain in the only city where the tariff entered in only city where the tariff entered into the discussion at all. The fatuity, therefore, of citing the Rhode Is and election as proof of a "reaction in favor of the tariff" obvious. Had the Republicans really scored a signal victory the cause would have been, not the maintenance but deliberate renunciation of the "protection" burbear: as they eliminated it entirely from their platform, and went as far as they dared in the direction of their direction of their opponents by indorsing reciprocity." be expected. It really matters dittle who shall be the Democratic standard-bearer with these two provisions: First, that McKiuley be his opponent and, second, that his own position be unqualified in favor of tariff reform. Nothing more is needed to define the issue between the two parties and, needless to add, the effect of the vesuit upon the greater contest a short year later would be past calculation.

The adjournment of Cohnecticut's Republican House of Representatives till November is pregnant with unpleasant consequences for everybody except Mr. Bulkeley. The appropriations will run out in July and no provision to meet the exigency has been made or can be made without the consent of the Democratic Senate. Endless troubles will ensue, and if the people are not yet alive to the awkwardness of their position, will ensue, and if the people are not yet alive to the awkwardness of their position, its full extent will be impressed upon them between July and November. In a political sense the Democratic Senate. Endless troubles of its constitutional obligation, refused to declare the election of Gov. Morris, it was perfectly plain that one of two courses only was dipnified, patriotic and feasible. Either Gov. Morris should have established Executive headquarters outside of the Capitol, to which he was refused admission, and performed his duties to the fullest extent to possible, or the Democratic Senate should possible, or the Democratic Senate should possible, or the Democratic Senate should officials. Many of them had contributed to dealer the Democratic Senate should officials. Many of them had contributed to dealer the Democratic Senate should officials. Many of them had contributed to dealer the Democratic Senate should officials. Many of them had contributed to dealer the Democratic Senate should officials. Many of them had contributed to dealer the Democratic Senate should officials. Many of them had contributed to dealer the Democratic Senate should be a served admission, and performed his duties to the f Executive headquarters outside of the Capitol, to which he was refused admission, and performed his duties to the fullest extent possible, or the Democratic Senate should have declined to take any action whatever until due recognition was accorded the Executive chowen by the people. Firm adherence to either of these policies would have fixed the responsibility for blocking the business of the State by revolutionary proceedings squarely upon the Republicans, and the people could have been trusted to administer a fitting rebuke at the first opportunity. But the Democrate failed to administer a fitting rebuke at the first opportunity. But the Democrate failed to rise to the occasion, conceded a possibility of "compromise," and thus opened the way for the Resublicans to divert attention from the main point by the injection of minor issues and endless discussion. The result might have been foreseen. Gov. Morris is compelled to ask justice of a partisan court and Bulkiely remains. Time, the Democratic Senators have denounced the latter individual as a usurper with commendate his vigor. But why the necessity of permitting him to "usurp" at all? That is what good Democrate, whose homes are not in Connecticut, cannot understand and the party suffers in consequence.
